DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1-2 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Boyd.

Boyd discloses an electromagnetic actuator comprising an actuator member 60 movable under the effect of a resilient member 84 and of at least one coil 42, and at least one permanent magnet 26 arranged to hold the actuator member in at least one of its extreme positions against the resilient member when the coil is not powered, the coil being associated with a core comprising two portions (12,30) having respective first facets in contact with the permanent magnet and respective second facets that present between them an airgap 31 of size that is much smaller than a thickness of the permanent magnet, wherein the airgap forms a right angle with the direction of magnetization of the permanent magnet. Boyd did not disclose a valve actuator. Boyd taught his device may be used in environments other than that disclosed (col. 1, lines 5-13). It was commonly known to those of ordinary skill in the art that valves may contain permanent magnets for the purpose of holding the valve body at an extreme position. It would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to employ Boyd's device as a valve actuator for the purpose recognized in the art, as discussed above.
